TO ORGANIZE A JUVENILE COURT

Move Made by Local Citizens
Today, Following G. Henri
Bogart's Lecture

EVOLUTION A BIG FACTOR

And the Psychological, Scientific Study of Heredity the Basis for a Great and Good Law

Sunday evening, at the Presbyterian church, Mr. G. Henri Bogart, of Brookville, delivered his lecture on "Child Saving a Factor in Racial Evolution," with a view of urging the organization of a Board of Children's Guardians and a Juvenile court in Rush county.

Mr. Bogart is president of the Board of Children's Guardians in Franklin county, and he is deeply interested and enthusiastic on this subject, especially since a great deal of good has been accomplished in Franklin county.

Mr. Bogart is a deep thinker and presented this subject—one of the momentous problems of the busy age—from both the psychologically scientific viewpoint and from that of Christian duty. He reinforced pertinent points of the lecture by selections from his poems.

Before introducing the real subject, Mr. Bogart explained the process of evolution, in order to lead up to the ways and means of saving children. Heredity and environment are the great factors in nature. In the evolution or enfoldment of the child life in its early stages there is the possibility of bending that life and directing it in better channels by changing the environment, and thus hereditary traits can sometimes be largely overcome. He showed what can be done by intelligent effort, citing the wonderful achievements of Luther Burbank.

After reviewing the progress of humanity through historical eras and showing that evolution indicates a yet higher development for the human race, the speaker explained the reformatory laws and ideas, the new methods inaugurated in the manner of treatment for crimes and criminals, from the old idea of revengefulness and punishment. Criminal, vicious and undesirable traits in the human race can be to a great extent eradicated by intelligent effort, thus saving the State and the people a vast expense in dealing with that element afterwards. Wise laws have lately been placed on our statute books to bring this about, and Indiana leads the way in this respect. The speaker then discussed the Indiana laws concerning child saving, juvenile courts, etc., illustrating the good accomplished by citing several practical cases.

It is a fact that the general statute for forming Boards of Children's Guardians, as an advisory arm of the court, became a law in 1901, and yet in spite of the beneficence of this law, nearly one-fourth of the State is not yet organized and this, unfortunately, includes Rush county. The entire southeast corner of Indiana has but one organized county—Franklin.

A Board of Children's Guardians is composed of three men and three women, all parents who are appointed by the judge of the court in term time.

Steps are being taken by some of our citizens who have been interested by Mr. Bogart, to file an application before Judge Sparks for the appointment of a board and the organization of a juvenile court in this county.

It is gratifying to note that the able presentation of this laudable step to higher and better social conditions by Mr. Bogart is already spurring our people to place Rush county where it belongs—in the forefront of all advanced movement.

LOCAL PASTOR WILL HOLD MEETING AT VINCENNES

Rev. R. W. Abberley Will Go to That City Next Sunday

Rev. R. W. Abberley, pastor of the Main Street Christian church will go to Vincennes the latter part of this week to assist in a series of meetings in that city.

The church at Vincennes has been trying for over a year to get Rev. Abberley to hold a meeting for them and he has decided to go at this time. The meeting will begin on next Sunday.

KEYS TO THE OLD LOG JAIL

At Court House Art Gallery
Bring Back Memories of Pioneer Days

HELD THE FIRST MURDERER

In Rush County And Only One
That Was Ever
Hanged

Warren Carmichael has presented Jabez Smith, court house custodian, with two old relics which recall the pioneer days of Rush county, especially the history of the early courts.

The relics referred to are two large keys, one to the first log jail ever erected in Rush county and the other key somewhat smaller was the key to the second jail.

The key to the first jail is about fourteen inches long and will weigh about sixteen ounces. The smaller one is about eleven inches in length and will weigh about thirteen ounces.

There are many things of interest which these old keys bring back to the mind of the older citizens. The larger key was the one which held Edward J. Swanson, the only man who ever paid the extreme penalty of the law in Rush county by an ignominious death on the scaffold.

It was at the April term of the court in 1829 that Swanson was tried for the murder of Elish Clark, and being found guilty, Swanson was sentenced to be hanged by Judge B. F. Morris. The hanging took place near the alley at the rear of Rich Wilson's residence in North Main street, one month after the murder. The hanging was done by Bussel Glore.

The old log jail to which the large key belonged was built by Richard Hackleman on the northeast corner of the public square in 1823. It was similar in shape to all the jails of the new counties, was most substantial, and but few, if any prisoners ever escaped.

The first jailer to use the old key, now on exhibition at the sheriff's room, was John Hays, who after his term of office, moved to Hancock county, where he became insane, and while trying to escape from jail, where he was confined, by burning out he was himself consumed in the flames.

The keys will be artistically arranged on a card-board and placed in the sheriff's room and will go to help make up the museum and art gallery.

PUBLISHED AT REQUEST OF BOARD OF HEALTH

The news article in Saturday evening's Daily Republican, relative to the smallpox cases in Franklin, was published at the instigation of Dr. Frank Green, secretary of the county Board of Health.

WILLIAM CURME MISSING AGAIN

Aged Man Who Tried to Suicide in Rushville,
Wanders Away

JUST CAME INTO HIS OWN

Receiving Farm Which Relatives
Fought Legal Battles to Keep From Him

William Curme, the old man who has been the central figure in a considerable amount of litigation in the Fayette circuit court recently, is again on the missing list.

Friday by a proceeding in the court, the State case against Alva Hamilton charged with assault on Curme, was dismissed with the understanding that the Hamiltons who had obtained a deed to Curme's farm in Orange township, would deed the land back to him.

Later Curme was declared of unsound mind and it was decided that the court should appoint a guardian to take charge of his affairs.

Curme then went to William Heron's place, south of Connersville, to spend the night. It was stated that about two o'clock this morning he left the Heron place and has not since been seen.

It will be remembered that on a previous occasion, just as he was about to be used as a witness against Hamilton, he disappeared and turned up next day in Rushville, where he attempted to buy a rope with which he said he intended to hang himself. After being placed in jail here, he threatened to bite himself to death.

RUSHVILLE PARTY AT BIG MEETING

City and County Officials Study
Y. M. C. A. Work in Indianapolis

With the idea of learning things, which, when applied locally, will make more attractive a series of "Big Meetings for Men" that has opened in Rushville, says the Indianapolis Star today, twelve city officials of Rushville and officers, as well as citizens of Rush county, interested in the meetings there, were guests at the Y. M. C. A. "big meeting" at English's Opera House yesterday afternoon. The members of the party found many things to commend in the "big meetings." Meetings, in which churches unite, are being held each Sunday afternoon at Rushville.

Yesterday's party from Rushville included Mayor Harvey M. Cowing, City Attorney George W. Young, City Clerk Grant Gregg, Street Commissioner T. M. Greenlee and Councilmen J. H. Ball and Samuel Young, of Rushville's city administration; Albert Winslip, auditor, Willard H. Amos, commissioner, and A. L. Stewart, surveyor of Rush county, and Fred McCloud, C. F. Mullin and James Dill, of Rushville.

Local weather prognosticators declare that the lightning and thunder storm of Sunday night will bring zero weather on or before New Year's day. It started in that direction today.

RUSH COUNTY SCHOOLS WERE WELL REPRESENTED

Rush county was well represented at the State Teachers' Association at Indianapolis last week. Those who attended were—J. L. Shauck, Norah Shauck, J. H. Scholl, W. A. Stockinger, John Geraghty, Minnie Beale, Dicia Trobaugh, Edna Trobaugh, Georgia Morris, Iva Burns, Amelia Peters, Rollin Glenn, Alma Braden, Hazel Binford, Emma Earnest, Margaret Fleehart, Anna McCorkle, Otis Hoskinson, Alfred Hall, V. E. Lowark, A. E. Martin, George Moore, James Williams, C. E. Downey, and County Superintendent W. O. Headlee.

MONUMENT TO GEN. HACKLEMAN

Local G. A. R. Post Will Revive Movement Started
Two Years Ago

ONLY GENERAL KILLED

Illustrious Rushville Citizen,
the Only Indiana General
Killed During Civil War

A monument to revive the efforts to secure a suitable monument, honoring the memory of Gen. Pleasant A. Hackleman, one of the most illustrious citizens that ever claimed this city as his home, is being started in the ranks of the G. A. R. of Indiana.

The Joel Wolf Post, of this city, will take the initiative in the matter and they are promised the earnest and unqualified support of all the camps of the State, whose members honor and revere the name of Hackleman.

The next legislature will find a strong lobby of the old veterans augmented by many distinguished and influential men of Indiana who will do all in their power to secure an appropriation adequate to erect a suitable monument.

Gen. P. A. Hackleman was born in Franklin county, but spent his manhood days in Rushville, practicing law. He was the only Indiana General killed in battle during the civil war, and it is not to the credit of the State that a monument to his memory has not been erected these years.

RUSH COUNTY MAN DIED AT FRANKTON

Remains of John Birt Will be Buried Tuesday at Arlington

John Birt, a former Rush county citizen, aged 78 years, died at his home in Frankton, Sunday morning. He was a veteran of the Civil war and a member of the Odd Fellow lodge.

The remains will be brought to Arlington, Tuesday, afternoon on the 1:30 car and the remains will be taken to the M. E. church, where the services will be conducted by Rev. Beck. Burial will take place at the Arlington East Hill cemetery.

Decensed leaves three daughters, Mrs. Ed Frank, Mrs. Ed Beher and Mrs. George Geisler, and two sons, Robert and William Birt, all of Frankton.

PROGNOSTICATORS SAY WE WILL HAVE ZERO WEATHER

Local weather prognosticators declare that the lightning and thunder storm of Sunday night will bring zero weather on or before New Year's day. It started in that direction today.

The "Pass-Over"

Yesterday was the feast of the "Pass-over." Not the Jewish observance, but the passing out of the annual passes held by city and county officials on the traction line. A law enacted by the last legislature provides that all the passes must be taken upon January 1st, consequently many Rushvillians took their last free ride yesterday. As noted elsewhere in this paper, a party of local men attended the Men's Big Meeting Indianapolis yesterday afternoon, and out of an even dozen passengers going to the meeting, ten rode "on their faces."

Are the life insurance companies economizing this winter in the matter of calendars?

THE WORLD IS GROWING BETTER DECLARES PASTOR

Rev. R. W. Abberley Preached
Excellent New Year's Sermon
Sunday Night

Rev. R. W. Abberley preached an excellent New Year's sermon Sunday evening at the Main Street Christian church on "Is the World Growing Better or Worse." The pastor took an optimistic view of the conditions and brought out many points, showing that this is the greatest and best century since the dawn of creation.

YOUNG MOTHER AND BABE DEAD

Both Will be Laid Away in The Same
Coffin

CHILD FIVE MONTHS OLD

Wife of J. T. McBride Succumbs to Tuberculosis After Much Suffering

A sad event indeed is the death of Mrs. Mary E. McBride, a young wife and mother, aged 20 years, and her five-months old child.

The child died Saturday morning at 6 o'clock as a result of pneumonia, and the mother followed it to the home beyond this morning at an early hour. Death was due to tuberculosis.

The husband, J. T. McBride, will have the mother and child buried in the same casket. The funeral cortege will leave the residence in Noble township Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock and the funeral services will be held at the Center church, conducted by Rev. Hawthorne. Burial at the Center cemetery.

CHURCH SERVICES HELD AT MIDNIGHT

Watch Party Will Mark Opening of Church Revival on New Year's Eve

Rev. W. H. Clark, pastor of the United Presbyterian church will preach the opening sermon at the revival to begin at St. Paul's M. E. church with a Watch Party on New Year's eve.

The services will be conducted by Dr. V. W. Tevis and will open at 10:30 o'clock. At twelve o'clock all the bells in the city will ring out the old year and ring in the new, closing a most impressive service.

MILROY CAMP M. W. OF A. WILL HAVE CELEBRATION

Milroy Modern Woodmen will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the order January 4th, by adopting a class of candidates and giving a big supper after the work is over. Members of Burr Oak Camp of this city and their wives and sweethearts are cordially invited to be present and join in the festivities of the occasion.

Mayor Morrow, of Benton Harbor, Mich., threw the key of his grocery store into the canal five years ago, and the place has not been locked since.

GASH ROSS DIED THIS AFTERNOON

Sank into a Stupor, Never to Regain Consciousness—
Death Was Unexpected

APPEARENTLY RECOVERING

Physician Had Dressed His Injuries But an Hour Before Death Came

Gash Ross, the I. & O. motorman injured on top of the traction car at Connersville, a few days ago, died this afternoon about 4 o'clock.

His death came as a surprise and shock to the family and to his friends, as the injured man showed every sign of improvement until a few minutes before his death.

Dr. E. I. Wooden, one of the attending physicians, called on Mr. Ross and dressed his injured arm but an hour before his death, and he not only seemed to be getting along nicely, but was in good spirits, having eaten a hearty dinner. After the physician left, Charles Moore, a barber, was called to shave Mr. Ross, and soon after he came the injured man suddenly sank into a stupor, never to become conscious again, and life became extinct about twenty minutes after he passed into that condition.

The attending physician says that in his opinion, death was due to internal hemorrhages caused by the fall off the car.

Regret was expressed on all sides that Mr. Ross should come to an untimely death, for he was popular and well liked by all who knew him.

BROKE HIS NECK AND DIED AT ONCE

Jerry McNamara, an Uncle of A.
P. Wagoner, Killed at New Palestine

A. P. Wagoner, of North Sexton street, attended the funeral of an uncle, Jerry McNamara, Sunday, who was killed at his home in New Palestine last week.

He was engaged in pulling down baled hay at the barn, when he slipped down the gangway and broke his neck, dying instantly.

FELL OFF THE WAGON, BUT NOT THE WATER WAGON

Ben Goodwin, of West First street, an employe of Harry Kramer, the butcher, fell off the delivery wagon this morning under the horses feet and sustained injuries to the hip and legs.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER RECEIVED BIDS TODAY

The county commissioners held a special meeting today and closed some unfinished business of their previous meeting. They also received bids from the local banking institutions for the various funds to draw interest under the new deposit law.

Generally fair tonight and Tuesday, except in north portion tonight; colder tonight.

TO CLEAR IT UP

Important Step Taken In the Matter of the Druce Mystery.

GRAVE TO GIVE UP SECRET

Was the Body of Thomas Charles Druce Laid In Tomb or Was Coffin Filled With Lead?

Alleged Dual Personality of the Fifth Duke of Portland Is Involved In Case.

London, Dec. 30.—The work of opening the grave of Thomas Charles Druce in Highgate cemetery to determine primarily whether the coffin contains the body of a man or, as has been asserted, a roll of sheet lead weighing some 200 pounds, was begun Sunday. Incidentally the clearing up of this mystery will help materially the progress of the famous Druce case.

The three-ton monument which marks the resting-place of the Druce family was removed by a score of workmen, who were protected from public observation by a shed which had been erected around the burial spot. All of those in attendance at the opening of the grave and the coffin have been sworn to secrecy, so that the result of the investigation will not be known until the experts give evidence at the police court.

Herbert Druce, the defendant in the now famous case, is charged with committing perjury by swearing that his father, Thomas Charles Druce of the Baker Street Bazar, died Dec. 28, 1864, and that he saw the dead body placed in a coffin and buried in Highgate cemetery. His nephew, George Hollambly Druce, declares that this must be untrue, because T. C. Druce was in fact the fifth Duke of Portland, who lived until 1879. That being so, George Hollambly Druce claims that he himself being the senior descendant in the male line, is now the rightful heir to the Portland dukedom and to certain rich estates, the income of which is placed at $1,500,000 a year, now held by Lord Howard De Walden. The opening of the grave, however, will not give conclusive proof of the claim of George Hollambly Druce.

The fifth Duke of Portland and a man known as Thomas C. Druce have been declared to be one and the same person by a dozen witnesses, but particularly by Robert Caldwell of New York, who testified at length and in detail to this effect during the present trial. Caldwell left London for New York the middle of December. Upon his arrival he was arrested at the request of the British authorities on a charge of perjury. He is now ill at his home on Staten Island. Should he be brought to trial the evidence obtained from the opening of the coffin would do much to convict or clear him.

Herbert Druce opposed the opening of the grave on the ground that he did not wish to desecrate his father's remains on the whim of a person who chose to make a claim to an estate he is not interested in, and who has put forward a claim, he declares he knows to be untrue. He was obliged finally, however, by the popular demand to put aside sentiment and consent to the exhumation for the purpose, as his advisors say of once and for all putting an end to the story for which Caldwell alone seems responsible, that there was lead in the coffin.

THE STATE TO ACT

Nevada Legislature to Be Called in Behalf of Goldfield.

Goldfield, Nev., Dec. 30.—The announcement made here today that Governor Sparks had telegraphed word to President Roosevelt that he will call the Nevada legislature together in special session as soon as possible, has put an entirely new aspect upon the labor situation here. At least a portion of the federal troops will, it is thought, remain in Goldfield for an indefinite period, and fear of any serious disturbance growing out of the dispute has vanished. It is not at all certain, however, that the legislature will act in connection with the wishes of Governor Sparks; but the calling of the special session will have the effect of keeping federal troops in Goldfield for several weeks and will make the possibility of serious trouble more remote.

The Esmeralda county grand jury has recommended the appointment of a board of arbitration to attempt a settlement of the strike. George A. Wingfield, a prominent member of the Mine Owners' association, is a member of the grand jury.

Took Law in Own Hands.

St. Louis, Dec. 30.—Henry Wieneke, aged thirty-one, of Seymour, Ind., is at the city hospital in a critical condition as the result of a surgical operation committed upon him, according to his story to the police, by William Crane, also thirty-one years old and from Seymour, as punishment under the unwritten law for Wieneke's admitted intimacy with Crane's pretty wife. Crane cannot be found in this city. Wieneke was found mutilated in a room of a boarding house near the Union station, where the operation took place, Wieneke says, after he had been rendered unconscious by liquor drank in Crane's company.

THE THAW CASE

Will Be Called for Second Hearing in New York Next Monday.

New York, Dec. 30.—One week from today Harry K. Thaw will be called a second time before a jury to make his defense to the charge of having murdered Stanford White. There have been several postponements of the date of the second hearing of this noted case, but it is said now there will be no further delay.

Mrs. William Thaw, mother of the defendant, is expected in the city by next Saturday. Mrs. Thaw has been in poor health, it is said, but believes she will be able to be with her son at the trial. Other members of the family circle, including Mrs. George Carnegie, Harry Thaw's sister, and Josiah and Edward Thaw, his brothers, are also expected to reach the city during the week and will remain throughout the trial. The Countess of Yarmouth, the defendant's sister, is at present in England and is not expected to attend the second trial. Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who has been a daily visitor at the Tombs ever since the first Thaw jury disagreed, will, of course, be one of the first arrivals in the courtroom on Monday next.

There have been many rumors as to the plans of the defense for the second hearing of the case, and it has been predicted that an entirely new line of action might be followed. It can be authoritatively stated, however, that the defense will again be the same, that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will again relate her story to the jury and that an imposing array of alienists will again undertake to establish the theory that Thaw was insane at the time he killed Stanford White in the Madison Square Roof Garden, but his since recovered his mental balance, and therefore is entitled to freedom.

In the coming trial, it is declared, there will be no mention of a higher or unwritten law, but the defense will adhere strictly to a plea of legal insanity at the time the act was committed. There is no longer any doubt that Evelyn Thaw will take the stand in defense of her husband and will be again the storm center of the trial. Martin W. Littleton of Brooklyn, who nominated Alton B. Parker for president at the last Democratic national convention, will act as leading counsel for the defense. He will have the assistance of Daniel O'Reilly and A. Russell Peabody, both of whom went through the first trial.

Detectives Hard at Work.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 30.—An autopsy has revealed that the woman whose body was found in the Hackensack meadows Thursday was first stunned and then drowned. The body is believed to be that of Agnes O'Keefe, a domestic who had been employed by several families in Orange. The detectives are hard at work tracing the life of Agnes O'Keefe, and by this means hope to arrest the murderer.

Tragedy at Muncie.

Muncie, Ind., Dec. 30.—John Skinner, a saloon keeper, shot and killed Gola Eppards, twenty-six years old. Skinner says that he killed Eppards in self-defense, as the latter, with several of his companions, made an effort to hold him up on his way home from his saloon early Sunday morning.

Found Dead in Hut.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 30.—Charles H. Perry, who traveled with several of the larger circuses for sixteen years, figuring as the skeleton man, was found Sunday dead in a hut in the outskirts of this city, where he had lately led a hermit's life. Death was due to natural causes.

CRASH UPON CRASH

Not as Single Spies But by Battalions Come the Troubles of Wm. Adler.

RECORD OF MISFORTUNES

Sensational Failure of Prominent New Orleans Merchant and Banker Followed by Further Disaster.

He Is Now a Shipwreck Refugee at Belize, His Last Hope of Recouping Fortune Gone.

New Orleans, Dec. 30.—Almost unparalleled misfortunes have been heaped in the short space of one week upon William Adler, one of New Orleans's foremost bankers and a leading wholesale grocer of the South. The arrival of news Sunday that Mr. Adler is a shipwreck refugee at Belize, British Honduras, added several new misfortunes to a record already big.

One week ago last night Mr. Adler's resignation as president of the State National bank shook New Orleans's financial circles. Since then the bank has announced that it must go out of business; Mr. Adler's wholesale grocery firm, one of the largest in the South, has gone into the hands of a receiver; a load of groceries consigned to Honduras, which Mr. Adler's friends claimed were one of his last hopes of recouping his fortunes, has been lost by shipwreck, and the steamer Alps, carrying both the groceries and Mr. Adler, and owned by Mr. Adler, is a total loss by the same wreck. By the merest slip of chance, the insurance policy on the shipload of groceries was rendered worthless by failure of premium payment before the wreck.

Misfortune has also dealt a blow at one of Mr. Adler's closest friends, Moses Schwartz, a prominent New Orleans merchant, who was with Mr. Adler on the Alps, and whose foundry here went into receivership shortly after the steamer sailed. The Alps lies on Glovers reef, scarcely fifty miles from the port he was making for Puerto Cortez, Honduras.

W. E. Lawrence has been appointed manager of the wholesale grocery firm of A. Adler & Co., with instructions to put the business on its feet if possible. Eastern creditors are heavily interested in the Adler firm.

"KANSAS FOR CHRIST"

This Is the Slogan an Indianian Carries Into Sunflower State.

Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 30.—"Kansas for Christ" is to be the slogan in a state-wide evangelistic campaign that is to be pushed simultaneously in every county of the "Sunflower State" next year. Hundreds of ministers of various denominations, together with numerous well-known evangelists, are to hold revivals. An entire year will be spent in the movement, and an effort is to be made to demonstrate to the whole country what may be accomplished in concerted religious work carried forward on strictly business lines. The great revival is to be under the direct leadership of Rev. William Edward Biederwolf of Monticello, Ind., who planned it.

The undertaking will be subject to the general supervision of a board of two ministers and two laymen from each denomination. This body, which has already been organized with fifty denominations represented, has selected Edward E. Taylor of Philadelphia, to act as secretary.

The plan is to have a large number of the best-known evangelists in the country, aided by the local pastors, give the entire season to work, and everywhere union meetings are to be carried on, directed by Rev. Biederwolf and the advisory board.

They Met on the Roof.

New York, Dec. 30.—The agitation for lower rents among the thousands on the Eastside continues unabated. All day Sunday the headquarters of the Anti-High Rent bureau was thronged with tenants. Committees were appointed and spent the day organizing the families in the tenement houses. Numerous meetings were held in the district to protest against the high rents, which the tenantry declared to be largely responsible for the poverty on the Eastside. The heads of twenty-seven families in one large tenement met on the roof and agreed to strike for a dollar reduction.

May Make Letter Public.

Washington, Dec. 30.—With the return of President Roosevelt early in the week from his outing in Virginia, it is not improbable that some new developments may occur in the navy department sensation which last week brought about the resignation of Rear Admiral Brownson from the bureau of navigation and sent him to the retired list. Chief interest now centers in the admiral's letter of resignation, and there are intimations that it may be made public, even before it is brought out by the anticipated congressional action.

Echo of San Francisco Fire.

Hamburg, Dec. 30.—The trans-Atlantic Fire Insurance company has voted to liquidate on account of the fact that more than half of its capital was lost by the San Francisco fire and earthquake.

HER POWER DISPUTED

Mrs. Eddy's "Next Friends" Oppose Big Donation to Charity.

Boston, Dec. 30.—Disputing the power of Mrs. Mary Baker Glover Eddy, head of the Christian Science church, to make disposition of so large a part of her fortune, formal notices have been served upon Trustees McLellan, Fernald and Baker, having in charge Mrs. Eddy's estate, ordering them not to make use of the $1,000,000 to found a charitable institution recently announced, or any other appropriation from Mrs. Eddy's estate, pending the outcome of litigation.

According to former United States Senator William E. Chandler, this action is to be followed by a new law.

WILLIAM E. CHANDLER.

suit involving the Christian Science head and her trustees, brought by the "next friends," Mrs. Eddy's son, Geo. W. Glover, his daughter, Mary Baker Glover, and Mrs. Eddy's adopted son, Dr. E. J. Foster of Waterbury, Vt.

The contention of Mr. Chandler is that the proposed appropriation of a million dollars is in direct violation of Mrs. Eddy's deed of trust of March 6, 1907, by which she turned over all her property to the three trustees for life, reserving only the right to use the income and certain realty, and which act marked the partial termination of litigation against her and the trustees by the "next friends" a few months since.

The new action it is declared will be entirely independent of another suit now pending against F. S. Streeter, Mrs. Eddy's attorney in Concord, demanding information concerning the deed of trust for $125,000 set aside by Mrs. Eddy for the benefit of her son, George W. Glover, and his daughter.

Georgia Heads the List.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 30.—With the advent of the new year, the law preventing the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor passed by the last session of the legislature, becomes effective, making Georgia the first of the Southern states to be placed in the prohibition column. The law is very drastic in its prohibition and prevents the keeping or giving away of liquors in public places and imposes a tax of $500 on clubs whose members are allowed to keep drinks of an intoxicating nature in their individual lockers.

Shot Sweetheart and Himself.

Abington, Mass., Dec. 30.—Miss Edith Mashley, eighteen years of age, died Sunday from a bullet wound inflicted Saturday night by her lover, Samuel H. Stetson, twenty-four years old, who killed himself immediately after shooting her. Just after the shooting the girl said she told her lover that he must give her up and that he had then shot her.

Long Journey Resumed.

Port of Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 30.—The American battleship fleet weighed anchor at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon and steamed for Rio Janeiro. The fleet is now on the second longest stage of the voyage from San Francisco. Nearly 3,000 miles of steaming lies ahead of them, and they are scheduled to reach Rio on Jan. 11. There the fleet will remain for ten days, and during its stay an elaborate program of entertainment has been arranged.

Outcome of Too Much Booze.

Barton, Va., Dec. 30.—After shooting and killing his mother-in-law, Mrs. Lydia M. Durkee, seventy years of age, driving his wife and children from home, and holding at bay a sheriff's posse which surrounded his house all Saturday night, Edward Butterfield, a farmer, was found dead in bed Sunday, having shot himself. Butterfield is supposed to have been crazed by liquor.

Bank Receivers Wanted.

Rensselaer, Ind., Dec. 30.—State Auditor Billheimer and Bank Examiner Hinshaw were here asking for receivers for Goodland and Parker banks. Judge Hanley set Jan. 8 for the hearing. Banker Parker's liabilities are reported to be $287,667.57.

The exploration of the vast unknown regions in the southern watershed of the Amazon river is the object of an expedition which is being organized in Boston under the supervision of George M. Boynton.

"DAINTY LAUNDERING"

Our methods of washing, starching and ironing would scarcely injure a butterfly's wing, much less a sturdy shirt or collar. Here may be a trifle of exaggeration in this statement, but you know what we mean, that we exercise conscientious care in the way we "do up" things. This is a laundry saving bank—your clothes last longer—because of his care we always use.

Saloon Men Say They Have Found a Way to Defeat Remonstrance.

A QUESTION OF ELECTIONS

They Declare Remonstrants Will Have to Abide by the Vote at Last General Election.

Members of Good Citizens' League Says Point Has Been Settled and Are Not Alarmed.

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 30.—Four ex-saloon keepers of this city, who were put out of business by the blanket remonstrances two years ago and who have applied for license again, will appear before the board of county commissioners this week to learn their fate. They are all hopeful that they will be successful and are basing their claims on the point that the remonstrance people will have to abide by the vote at the last general or state election, instead of at the last city or ward election.

The Good Citizens' League, which had charge of getting up the last general remonstrance in the First ward, where all the saloons were located, is satisfied that the point in contention had already been decided by the supreme court in their favor, and the members of the organization are not alarmed by the movements of the saloon men.

HELP TO ANSWER

Two Men Accused of Carrying Off a 600-Pound Safe.

Boonville, Ind., Dec. 30.—Levi and Harmon Lockhart, aged thirty-five and forty-two respectively, were arrested, charged with stealing a big 600-pound safe from Joe Hudspeth's saloon Thursday night and hauling it into the country two miles, where they rifled it to the extent of $300, leaving only a few checks. Both pleaded not guilty to the charge when arraigned in the circuit court, where Hudspeth's affidavit was filed by approval of Deputy Prosecutor Moore. Judge Roscoe Kiper bound the men over in the sum of $500 each, which they could not fill.

Levi Lockhart came to Boonville recently, having served a term in an Illinois prison for embezzlement. He admitted to officers his recent confinement and the police express confidence that the confession of the novel crime will be wrung from both men.

Suicide of Kokomo Lawyer.

Kokomo, Ind., Dec. 30.—Grief because of the action of his son, who was recently arrested in Chicago charged with stealing jewelry from Chicago homes, is believed to have prompted the suicide of Attorney I. C. Hoopes, who shot himself through the head. Although it is said he showed signs of mental weakness before his son, Richard Hoopes, was arrested in Chicago, the affair caused a notable change in his manner. The son escaped prosecution through the efforts of his father. Attorney Hoopes evidently realized his condition. He constantly feared poverty and madness. Mr. Hoopes was a member of the Howard county bar several years and was reputed to be wealthy.

Victim of Cold.

Michigan City, Ind., Dec. 30.—The body of Miss Imogene Kinner of Penn Yan, N. Y., who disappeared from this city on Dec. 11, was found Sunday on the bank of a creek in a wild and unfrequented place. She had taught school at Yonkers and at Nyack, N. Y. Over-study had caused nervous prostration and she came here a month ago to spend the winter with relatives. It is supposed that she lost her way in the country and perished of cold.

Teachers Elect Officers.

Indianapolis, Dec. 30.—The Indiana Teachers' association announced the election of George W. Benton, principal of Shortridge high school as president of the association. J. B. Percy of Anderson was re-elected as secretary of the organization, and Miss Elizabeth Hull of Sullivan was made recording secretary. W. H. Sanders, superintendent of schools at Bloomington, will be chairman of the executive committee for the next year.

Shot by Mother-in-Law.

Sellersburg, Ind., Dec. 30.—Driven to desperation by wrongs which she thought her son-in-law had inflicted upon her daughter, Mrs. N. L. Beck Saturday night went to the skating ring owned by her son-in-law, Daniel Scheller, and in the presence of a large crowd shot him twice, failing, however, to inflict a mortal wound. Mrs. Beck is the wife of Prof. W. L. Beck, principal of the Sellersburg schools for the last fifteen years.

Charged With Embezzlement.

Worthington, Ind., Dec. 30.—J. W. Hanahan, agent for the E. & I. railway and Wells-Fargo Express company at Coal City, was arrested here by Marshal W. E. Thompson on a charge of embezzlement. It is alleged that the express company's books show a shortage of $65 and the railroad company's probably $40. Hanahan has a wife and two children.

Practical Wives.

The wives of men of sentiment often possess a vein of strong common sense and a matter of fact nature which may at times serve to bring their poetical husbands down from their flights of fancy rather rudely.

Jean Paul represents Siebenkas as reading one of his beautiful fancies to his wife, who listened with eyes cast down, apparently absorbed in his words. As he finished and waited for her appreciation to express itself she said quickly:

"Don't put on those stockings tomorrow, dear. I must mend that hole in the left one."

One day, when Sir Walter and Lady Scott were roaming about their estate, they saw some playful lambs in a meadow.

"Ah," said Sir Walter, "'tis no wonder that poets from the earliest ages have made the lamb the emblem of peace and innocence!"

"They are indeed delightful animals," said Lady Scott, "particularly with mint sauce."

Frenzied Finance.

A negro down in Virginia was telling a lawyer acquaintance about another negro who owed him $2, but after continued dunning for some time positively refused to pay.

"Well," said the lawyer, "if he positively refused to pay you, what reason did he give?"

"Well, boss," said the negro, "he said he had owed me dat money fo' so long dat de interest had dun et all up, an' he didn't owe me a cent."—New York Times.

If you suffer from backache.

There is only one way to cure it

The perfect way is to cure the kidneys.

A bad back means sick kidneys.

Neglect it, urinary troubles follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills are made for kidneys only.

Are endorsed by Rushville people.

O. P. Wellman, 123 W. Third street, Rushville, Ind., says: "I was afflicted with a steady dull aching in the region of my kidneys and my back was so very weak that I was unable to lift anything.

Reading of Doan's Kidney Pills being a good remedy for backache and kidney difficulty and knowing from the nature of the kidney secretions that my kidneys were not normal, I went to F. B. Johnson & Company's drug store and got them. After using several doses of this remedy, the urinary trouble was banished, and my head felt much better and the pain in my back was removed. I can strongly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

FEEDING SHEEP.

Satisfactory Device For Holding Hay, Silage or Grain.

In describing a hay and grain rack a well known sheep feeder writes in National Stockman and Farmer as follows:

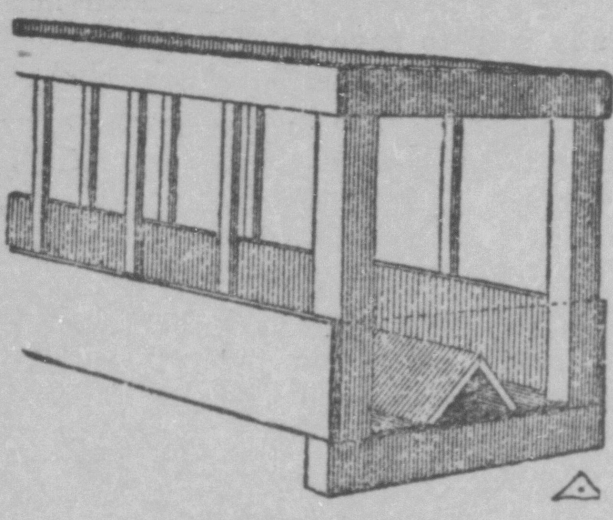

The best kind of a device will depend upon what is to be done with the sheep. If for fattening sheep or those being wintered as stores I have never found a better rack than the single one shown in the cut for a side rack or to stand so that the back side of it will form an alley fence, or it may stand out in the pen so sheep can go all around it. It can be made double, as is also pictured. In either case the posts should be thirty inches high. The flat part of each side of bottom should be ten inches wide. The slanting pieces of double rack should each be ten inches and put together as shown. In the single rack the slanting board should be fourteen inches.

The bottom strip on both racks should be eight and the top strip four inches wide respectively. This will make the uprights between sheep fourteen inches in the clear, and they should lap on both the bottom and top strip far enough to be nailed firmly with clinch nails. These uprights should be three inches wide and planed so as to be smooth, and the distance apart will depend upon the size of sheep. Lambs will do well with them one foot from the centers, but larger sheep should have them far enough apart so there will be room for sheep to come up and eat without crowding. These strips allow the sheep to come straight up to the rack and eat, but prevent one sheep from crowding all the others out of the rack, which a stout sheep is sure to do without these crosspieces. The slanting boards on the bottom have their lower edges slanted off so as to fit tightly upon the bottom board and be well nailed. These racks may be of any convenient length, but if no more than eighteen feet long they will need only three sets of posts or legs. In these racks can be fed hay, silage, roots and grain by being cleaned of soiled or dirty food, which is very easily done with a wooden shovel made on purpose or by a stiff broom.

Roots For Farm Animals.

If roots are stored in a pit in the field a high, dry place should be chosen. If the ground is clayey the roots should be placed on top of the ground. If it is gravelly and drainage is good a shallow pit about five feet wide and of necessary length may be shoveled out. The roots should be carefully placed in a gable shaped pile about five feet wide and as long as convenient. A thin layer of straw should then be laid over the pile and this covered with six to eight inches of earth. Another and thicker layer of straw and a final layer of earth will complete the work. Ventilators should be placed at intervals of ten or fifteen feet, which should be closed when sweating has ceased. The pit should not be opened on warm days in winter. A ditch for drainage should be cut around the pit. Roots stored in this way do not keep as well as when stored in a good cellar; therefore they should be fed out as early as possible.—New York Cornell Experiment Station.

Fall Plowing Destroys Insects.

Many insects may be prevented by fall plowing. Land in grass for a number of years often becomes badly infested with cutworms, wireworms and other insects that may prove very destructive to corn and other cultivated crops. If the land is plowed in the fall, the freezing and thawing of winter will destroy a large number of these pests. If, on the other hand, the land were left unplowed until late spring, they would have an ideal place in which to pass the winter and come out in the spring ready to destroy everything in sight. In the case of spring plowing of soil and the food of these insects is suddenly destroyed by the plow, and the few plants of corn or tobacco then put in the ground are not sufficient to feed this horde of insects, and it becomes next to impossible to get a crop started.—Professor J. H. Phillips, Virginia Experiment Station.

IMPRESSIONS ABROAD.

British Thoroughness and Love of Good Blood.

That one who has traveled to the various countries of the globe and studied the conditions there is "glad to get back under the stars and stripes, where taxes are reasonable and where freedom reigns," is the opinion of a loyal son of Iowa expressed in the Homestead on reaching home, to which sentiment, however, he frankly adds this appreciation of English methods: England unquestionably is a great place for good live stock. The reason for this is that they have persisted in raising good ones, and they are now reaping their reward. I presume that Americans will achieve the same results when they have been in the business as long as their cousins across the water. I certainly believe that it pays us to introduce the best blood that we can find abroad into our flocks and herds here.

A study of English methods of sheep breeding reveals the fact that great pains have been taken there about the selection of the sires. They never stop at a few dollars if they can find something good.

Foreign Thoroughness.

Joe Wing of Ohio, favorably known as a sheep grower throughout this country and home again after spending some months in Europe, writes to the Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. What has he got out of his journeyings? A great deal, he hopes. He has come home less boastful than he was. America is a grand country, but we can yet learn much, must learn much. We need not lose our loyalty to see our faults. We have not learned it all. We deceive ourselves sometimes by underestimating what other peoples have done. In some things they are behind us, no doubt. Sometimes they seem to have less energy, but they make up for that in thoroughness. They are not stationary either; they progress quite as fast as we, especially in Denmark and Scotland.

We immensely lack in energy and enterprise when it comes to devoting an entire neighborhood to growing one sort of horse or cow or sheep and to making that sort the very best. We are too much inclined to independence of thought and action. We cannot agree. I breed, for instance, Hackneys; my neighbor will take Shires, his neighbor Percherons, the next man trotters; the next fellow believes in mixing bloods as much as possible, and a lot of us will choose the cheap stallion that insures, to "stand and suck." Thus we do not get ahead as we would if we adopted the Scottish plan of horse associations, neighbors pledged to use a splendid sire, committees hunting him up and securing him, and all pledged to support him by liberal service fees. We will never reach their level of success till we have more unity of action and more steadfastness of purpose.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

The American Breeders' association will hold its next annual meeting Jan. 28-30 in the National Rifles' armory at Washington. The secretary of the association is W. M. Hayes of the department of agriculture.

Don't Pick Up a Scrub.

Live stock gets scrubby fast enough even when good males are used, and it is a shortsighted policy to hasten the process by breeding from an inferior male. Do not wait around until you are absolutely in need of a male and then go and pick up somebody's scrub.

Type of American Carriage Horse.
The type desired for the American carriage horse, as decided upon by a representative committee of American breeders and horsemen, is as follows: Not under fifteen hands for mature horses; smooth, compact and symmetrical conformation; neck of good length, inclined naturally to arch; sloping shoulders; well set legs of medium length; sloping pasterns and good feet; short, strong back; well sprung ribs, well ribbed up to coupling; smooth loins; full flanks; straight croup, with well set tail; full, round buttocks.

Cabbage as Feed.

The Cornell station says that in the search for good succulent feeds for live stock the cabbage should not be overlooked. As high as fifty tons of cabbage per acre have been grown at Cornell, yielding nearly four tons of dry matter and containing one ton of nitrogenous matter.

The Colt's Feet.

Keep a good rasp handy and use it judiciously in keeping the feet of the colts level and of proper shape. Don't let the toes become too long.

Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. It is also indispensable in order to keep the colts free from worms and lice and their feet free from thrush.

A foot pick is a much more important implement in the colt stable than the currycomb or brush. When the soles of the feet are picked clean and washed every day there is little danger that they will become affected with thrush.—Horse Breeder.

Horse Stealing.

In regard to the operations of horse thieves, which in some parts of the country have been assuming unusual boldness, a western exchange remarks: The organized vigilance of a community is the best safeguard against horse stealing or any other kind of thievery. Where anthorship thief and protective associations exist nine out of every ten thieves are caught, and at this rate they soon give up such communities. The time to organize is before the property is stolen. That it is wise to lock the stable door before the horse is stolen is a proverb which applies very aptly to this case.

DRY FARMING ON BIG SCALE. Notice of Guardian's Sale of Real Estate.

Colorado Citizens Unite to Try Out the Plan on 4,000 Acres.

The greatest dry farming project ever attempted in western Colorado has recently been launched by over a score of prominent citizens of Grand Junction, who have filed on 4,000 acres of government land in the Fruita forest reserve, ten miles northwest of Fruita, Colo. This tract is to be cultivated by the Campbell system of soil culture, and water will be used only for domestic purposes and will be obtained from wells, says a Grand Junction dispatch to the New York World.

Experiments in dry farming for the past two years have been conducted on small tracts in the reserve, and these have proved so successful that the immense tract taken up will be treated by the same methods.

With dry farming a success on this side of the range it is believed that there will not be a foot of land uncultivated in ten years.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

We are authorized to announce the name of Bruce Graham as a candidate for county Sheriff, subject to the decision of the Republican nominating convention.

We are authorized to announce the name of Jesse M. Stone, of Ripley township, as a candidate for county Auditor, subject to the decision of the Republican nominating convention.

Republican Meetings.

The Republicans of Rush County will meet in mass conventions in the various townships, on Friday January 10th, 1908 or Saturday January 11th, 1908 for the purpose of electing one precinct committeeman from each precinct and one delegate to the district meeting to be held at Cambridge City Indiana on Tuesday January 14th, 1908.

The newly elected committeemen will meet at the Court House, in Rushville Indiana on Monday January 13th, 1908 at 2:00 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of organizing the County Committee by selecting a County Chairman and other officers of the Committee.

Rushville Township will have two delegates and other townships one each and for each delegate an alternate.

CHARLES A. FRAZEE, Chairman.

WILL C. MCCOLGIN, Secretary.

Republicans of Rush county should not neglect to attend the precinct conventions which will be held January 10th or 11th. Much depends on the men selected for precinct committeemen, and it is your duty as a Republican to be on hand and assist in securing good men for this important place.

On Dec. 21st, the chaplain of the House at Guthrie, Oklahoma, prayed that Bryan might be the next President of the United States. The prayer was applauded, and the speaker put the prayer to a vote, all Democratic members voting aye. This clinches the matter. Diety will surely not disregard the will of the chaplain and the majority of the Oklahoma legislature.

INDIANA POLITICS

BY ROBERT G. TUCKER

Indianapolis, Ind., December 30.—Representative John Edwards of Mitchell is now lining up his friends for the nomination for lieutenant governor on the Republican ticket, but he will refrain from making a formal announcement until after the first of the year. He may wait to see the outcome of the race for chairman in his district. Edwards is expected to have many followers among the members of the house of representatives in the last three sessions. He was very popular with them. The word is being passed along the line that Governor Hanly intends to oppose Senator Fremont Goodwine of Williamsport for the nomination for lieutenant governor. It is said that he has told a number of people lately that Goodwine cannot be nominated, but at this time Goodwine and Edwards are the only candidates, and the governor is said to feel even more deeply toward Edwards than toward Goodwine. Edwards made no secret of his hostility to the governor in the last session of the legislature, and is not courting any favors from the executive now. It is not believed that the governor will turn to Edwards even to down Goodwine, so if he really hopes to beat the latter he will have to bring out a candidate. Roy Shattuck, mayor of Brazil, who announced his candidacy some time ago for lieutenant governor, has found that he is not eligible no mercy, no generosity. It knows only self and borders closely onto that which is vicious and brutal."

In a recent lecture by Prof. Franklin H. Giddings, of Columbia University in "The Jew in America," the fact was brought out that Luis de Santangel, Ferdinand's financial secretary who advanced to Isabella the ducats which enabled Columbus to reach the New World, was a Jew, penanced as a heretic by the inquisition in 1491, and tradition relative to the voyage of Columbus has it that the first individual of his party actually to land on American soil was a Jew. Thus it appears that the Jew is not a new comer in America and that he has been here longer than most of the other racial or national elements that went into the making of the so-called early Americans.

There are many Democrats who would like to find a man to supplant Bryan, but he is not to be discovered. Mr. Bryan has the nomination in his hands, and he will not let it be taken from him. There are men in his party who would like to get it, but they do not make an effort, for they think it would be of no use. It appears to them as if Mr. Bryan, in spite of his two defeats, had a lien on the nomination. Democratic papers may appeal to these men to come out and make a fight to free the party from its bondage to Bryan, but they will not budge. The gentleman from Nebraska has made up his mind to run again and nobody can stop him. He looks on the nomination as his birthright, and nobody dares to attempt to supplant him.

A great need in Rush county is a Board of Children's Guardians and the organization of a juvenile court, as provided for by the laws of the State of Indiana. Most of the counties in the State have complied with the law, but Rush county is delinquent. Undoubtedly there are some neglected children in the county that need looking after and this cannot be done better and with better results than through a Board of Children's Guardians and a juvenile court. The idea is to change the environment of the child before it is too late. Law makers and the general public are beginning to realize that it is cheaper for the State to prevent the embryo criminal, pauper, drunkard and shiftless from fully developing rather than to deal with him when full-fledged. There are ample laws on the statute books to deal with such cases—all that is necessary is proper enforcement. For that reason Rush county should not be behind her sister counties in looking after her children.

to the place under the provisions of the state constitution. It is said that he could not resign as mayor to run for lieutenant governor. Representative Branch of Martinsville, who was speaker of the last house, is still a prospective candidate for lieutenant governor, and Governor Hanly might turn to him, but it is said that Branch is not anxious to enter the running.

An effort is being made to organize the anti-Landis forces of the Ninth district against Congressman Charles B. Landis of Delphi. Two secret conferences have been held here during the last ten days. Men from every county in the district were present, and it is said they are determined to accomplish Landis's defeat next year. The net result of their efforts so far is the candidacy of Judge Harness of Kokomo for the nomination. An effort, it is said, will be made to bring out two or three other candidates and to elect delegates who can be used in a combination against Landis. It is not believed, however, that the combination will be successful, as Landis's friends are busy throughout the entire district setting up pins for him. Congressman Landis will return to Indiana this week to spend several days in his district, and his friends say that by the time the state committee is reorganized he will have things arranged so that he cannot be beaten.

CURRENT COMMENT

Child Labor and the Law.

It is only recently that the proposal to prohibit the employment of children under sixteen years of age was generally hailed as a proper measure and a reform which pretty much the whole country would ultimately adopt. The decision of the Ohio circuit court that a law which prohibits the employment of minors under fourteen years of age is unconstitutional will therefore take by surprise all friends of child labor legislation and perhaps astonish a good many students of the question of personal rights involved in such legislation. The court decision regards the law an unwarrantable interference with liberties guaranteed to the citizen by the state and national constitutions.

Legislation restricting child labor and even prohibiting it under certain conditions has been the rule rather than the exception in this country for a number of years, and often the highest state courts have affirmed the validity of such laws as a proper exercise of police power. But there is no uniformity of state conscience in this matter. In a message to congress a couple of years ago the president said, "Each state must ultimately settle the question in its own way." It would seem that where a state forces a child into the schools it can close the factory doors upon him until he has passed school age, and it has been suggested that a simple way out of the dilemma when public sentiment is undecided would be to raise the educational limit to that which is desired for the restriction of child labor. Another indirect method for accomplishing the purpose is the proposed law to exclude from interstate commerce goods upon which child labor has been employed. Eventually public opinion may become so disposed that the technicalities involved in such measures will not be insisted upon.

When Actors Act Nobly.

Witty paragraphs have their fling at the 3,000 actors who are said to be waiting this winter outside the stage doors in New York city for something to turn up. Meanwhile news dispatches tell of benefit performances given at different places for the sufferers in the mine disaster at Monongah. It is no new thing that actors are requested to give their time for aid of causes which can have no relation to the profession of the stage. They give generously out of that warm hearted sympathy they hold for all who are in distress. On the other hand, their own distresses, hardships and grievances are often made the subject of scoffing.

So naturally do the people of the stage respond to calls for benefit performances that the public is inclined to shift part of its burden upon them. A benefit performance is given, a snug sum raised, and the average man applauds a noble feeling which has never worked its way to the inside of his own pocketbook. If he pays a dollar to see the show he looks for his money's worth and gets it with interest usually, for the performer who is acting for love feels new inspiration and does his best. Really the actors of this country should be looked upon as a hardworking, whole hearted class, whose misfortunes are many and whose sorrows are as touching as any human griefs. When their own are out of work they relieve them with an open hand, and the cause of the widows and orphans, who should be the wards of all society, never appeals for their services in vain. If their quick response were more widely emulated the calamities which sweep off breadwinners by scores and hundreds would be robbed of their bitterest terrors.

Neither Grant nor Thomas nor Sherman sought commissions in the Confederate army, but if they had sought them and obtained them who knows what would have become of Lee, Johnston, Jackson, Beauregard and Hood? Would they have played second fiddle?

Financial Trouble Not Due to Lack of Money.

By Senator PORTER J. McCUMBER of North Dakota.

THINK THAT THE PRESENT UNSETTLED FINANCIAL CONDITIONS ARE DUE TO MISTAKEN BUSINESS METHODS RATHER THAN TO ANY FAULT IN OUR PRESENT CURRENCY SYSTEM. MANY PEOPLE SEEM TO THINK THAT EVERY TIME WE GET INTO ONE OF THESE FINANCIAL DIFFICULTIES WE OUGHT TO ISSUE MORE CURRENCY TO COVER IT, BUT THEY'RE MISTAKEN. WE HAD JUST AS MUCH MONEY IN THE COUNTRY WHEN THIS RECENT FINANCIAL DISTURBANCE ATTACKED US AS WE DID SIX MONTHS BEFORE, WHEN ALL WAS RUNNING WELL. THE REAL FAULT, THEREFORE, CAN'T BE A LACK OF MONEY.

For the past eight years we have had such unprecedented prosperity that people HAVE GONE WILD COMMERCIALY. Our banks have been overflowing with money as a result of immense trade balances in our favor. All our industries were being developed on an enormous scale. WE HAD NO RIGHT TO EXPECT THAT SUCH CONDITIONS WOULD BE WITHOUT END. Nevertheless properties were bonded far in excess of INHERENT value; stocks were issued far beyond the inherent worth of the assets of the corporations issuing them. They were put on the market, sold and resold for many times their values in some instances, and generally for prices in excess of their true value. Banks gave credit on these stocks at their SELLING PRICES rather than their REAL VALUES considered from the standpoint of the reasonable earning capacity of the institutions issuing them.

The banks have set up a cry that they must have MORE MONEY—in other words, they must cheapen the value of the money of the country by an extensive expansion for the purpose of continuing to float the ABNORMAL volume of the stocks and bonds involved. This, however, is impossible of accomplishment. SOME ONE MUST LOSE ON ACCOUNT OF THESE EXCESSIVE VALUES. And I think that perhaps the sooner we get down to bedrock values of all industrials the better it will be for the country. THE BANKS THEMSELVES ARE MORE TO BLAME for the present stringency and type of business than the people themselves.

SEA SERPENT CHASE.

Old Norwegian Sailor Seeks Backing For Queer Project.

WILL USE WHALING METHODS

Carl Olsen Will Use a Harpoon Provided With a Bomb—A Ship Will Drag the Apparatus Along the Ocean's Bottom.

Carl Olsen, an old seafaring man, who lives in Christiania, Norway, believes that the only way to convince a skeptical world that sea serpents really exist is to catch one, says the Kansas City Times. Furthermore, he is willing to undertake the job provided anybody can be persuaded to risk $2,500 to defray the cost of the expedition. Recently he inserted an advertisement in one of the London papers to try to find a financial backer for his projected sea serpent hunt. He has received several answers, but none of them has been quite satisfactory. But he is still hopeful that he will succeed in landing a capitalist before the sea serpent season opens. He has done much of his voyaging in English ships and speaks English well.

"I advertised in a London paper," he said, "because rich folk are thick as blackberries there, and from what I have heard many of them put a lot of money into schemes that, to say the least of it, are quite as risky as a sea serpent chase." Olsen believes in sea serpents, though he never had the good fortune to see one himself. "But in my sea experience I have met many sailors that have," he added, "and I'd accept their evidence any day against the opinion of landlubbers who know nothing of the mysteries of the deep. If the persons I know who have seen sea serpents only had money I would not have to advertise in a London paper for a capitalist to back my scheme." "Have you devised any plan for catching a sea serpent?" he was asked. "Of course I have," he answered. "I wouldn't expect anybody to put money into the idea if I hadn't. What I propose to do is to apply in principle the method followed by modern whalers. You know they shoot the whale with a harpoon provided with a bomb that explodes when the line tightens. The bomb not only kills the whale, but generates a lot of gas, which prevents it from sinking.

"But as sea serpents don't seem to come to the surface often they will have to be sought on the bottom at perhaps considerable depth, and that will necessitate a modification of the whaling method. Instead of trying to shoot a harpoon into a sea serpent one will have to go fishing for him. The apparatus will be dragged along the bottom of the sea by a ship. Attached to the bait will be a bomb. When the sea serpent swallows the bait he will swallow the bomb, too, for it needn't be a particularly big one to do the business. When the sea serpent starts moving of course he will give a yank on the line. That yank will release three steel claws and at the same time explode the bomb. The steel claws will prevent the creature from getting loose even if the bomb don't kill it. Of course one can't make everything clear without drawings, but I've schemed everything out and provided for fixing the bomb so that it can't be discharged by mere contact with the sea bottom."

One of the serious propositions for the people of Canada to solve is the fuel supply of the future. Not a pound of coal of any kind has ever been discovered in the province of Ontario. In the older part of the province the timber is practically exhausted. The grotesquelooking stump fences, the last remains of the once gigantic pine forests, are now being replaced with wire fences and the stumps converted into fuel for the furnace and stoves.

He Loved a Thief.

[Original.]

A number of happenings conspired to give me my beloved Cecile, and the strangest of all of them was that a man whom I never saw or heard of should have crossed my path twice. Queer, isn't it, that one should be indebted to a thief for the inestimable treasure of a good wife, a wife of rare common sense, a wife capable of making a wise decision without time for consideration.

I entered my hotel in the dusk of the evening, went upstairs and was surprised to see the door of my room ajar. Quickly entering, I saw a young, well dressed woman standing in the center of the room. Near her was my trunk open—I had left it locked—and much of its contents scattered over the floor.

"Caught in the act!" I said to her. She was as white as a sheet, and I feared she would faint. I started to push the electric button to summon others, but she caught my hand in a viselike grip. Then, putting her other hand to her heart, she tried to speak. Finally she succeeded in doing so in a whisper:

"Don't! For heaven's sake, don't! I can't go to jail. I couldn't endure it. It would kill me. Spare me. I am innocent."

The last three words angered me. "Innocent!" I exclaimed. "You are adding a lie to a theft."

Her grip tightened spasmodically on my wrist.

"I confess," she said presently. "Let me go."

There had been nothing of especial value in the trunk. If I should have the girl arrested I would be put to a great deal of trouble. Besides, I had not the heart to send her to prison.

"Go," I said, pointing to the door.

She raised the wrist she held, kissed my hand and rushed from the room.

What was my surprise the next morning to see her leave the hotel in company with an elderly lady of apparent respectability, both getting into a private carriage.

"Who are those ladies?" I asked of the clerk of the hotel.

"Mme. Crawshaw and her daughter."

"Do you know anything about them?"

"I should say so. They always stop here when they come to the city; have stopped here for years."

It occurred to me that the girl was either a kleptomaniac or one of those people who support a respectable station by theft. The former supposition could not be correct, for only an expert could have picked the lock of my trunk. The case was so mysterious that it occupied my mind to the exclusion of everything else. The last object I saw before going to bed at night and the first thing on awakening in the morning was that terrified, imploring face. I tried to dismiss it, but it would not be dismissed. If the girl had not been a thief I should have suspected that I had fallen in love with her.

Three years passed. I had not ceased to wonder about the girl who had robbed me. Indeed, I had become infatuated with either the mystery attending the case or something remembered in her personality, I could not determine which. One day I received a letter from the chief of police of a distant city stating that a burglar had been arrested in whose lair was found many stolen articles. One was a book with my name and address on the fly leaf. The collection was open to my inspection.

The book had been in the trunk that had been rifled. I cared nothing for it, but would not the arrest of this man throw some light on the girl who had robbed me? Doubtless she was the man's accomplice. I took a train at once and on my arrival went to the police office. There were the book and several other articles of mine.

I was permitted to interview the burglar, and he told me that he had entered my room at the hotel, opened my trunk and taken what he wanted. He left without being discovered. He knew nothing of the girl I had found in my room and had no accomplice.

My next move was to write to the hotel where I had been robbed and ask for the address of Mme. Crawshaw. In due time I received it and one morning called at an eminently respectable residence and sent up my card to Miss Crawshaw. When she came down and saw me she paled and caught at the back of a chair.

"Don't fear me. I have called to say that I am convinced of your innocence. The man who robbed me has been arrested, and in his possession articles of mine contained in the trunk rifled have been found. I am here to right a wrong. And now will you explain your presence in my room?"

She clasped her hands, raised her eyes and exclaimed, "My God, I thank thee!"

At the moment she appeared to me very beautiful, but I know not if my long interest in her had not begotten love and love had not made me see her as I did. Then she gave me the explanation, which was very simple. In going to her room, which was next to mine, she had entered mine instead of her own. She was looking about her bewildered when I entered. Realizing her situation, she was appalled. Believing that to confess and throw herself on my mercy would be her best chance, she did so. In this she was right.

This is how I came to know Cecile and know of that ability for quick, wise decisions which she has since so often shown. But the fact remains that I loved her when I supposed her to be a thief. C. N. AVERY.

WILL THE GIRLS PROPOSE THEN?

Large Crowd Will Dance into the New Year, a Leap Year

AT THE CHARITY BALL

Which Promises to be One of the Most Elaborate Social Functions of the Season

For sweet charity's sake will be the slogan of the Charity Ball to be given by the Tri Kappa sorority of this city, in the Modern Woodmen hall tomorrow night.

It promises to be one of the greatest social functions ever given in this city. The ball room is being tastefully decorated today, and a high class orchestra has been secured in Indianapolis to furnish the music for the occasion.

Several hundred invitations have been sent out, and a large number of out-of-town guests will be in attendance. Some there are who were barbarously cruel enough to suggest that the sorority cleverly arranged the event for New Year's eve, on account of 1908 being leap year, and with a ball room setting, a number of handsome young men, the dreamy, intoxicated, catchy airs of the dance music, the whirling, swirling and twirling over the glossy surface with fairy like grace, cuddled or comfy in the arms of a coveted one, made it an ideal place and time for the girls,—ah! well, its leap year, but folks should not make such deductions.

The real object of the ball is a most commendable one indeed. The proceeds will be used in a charitable manner among the poor and needy of the city. If the affair is a success—and it has every promise of being such—it will be made an annual event.

In several instances have the members of the local sorority thoughtfully and nobly assisted in charitable enterprises, and all have their heart and soul in the Charity Ball, extremely anxious that their efforts be crowned with success.

The dance will begin at 8:30 o'clock and the grand march will be given promptly at 9 o'clock. Dainty refreshments will be served through out the evening.

The Mesdames James E. Watson, Will Sparks and Frank Mull, patronesses of the sorority, will be in attendance as chaperons.

BROTHERHOOD WILL GIVE BANQUET NEW YEAR'S EVE

The Brotherhood of the Presbyterian church will give a banquet on New Year's eve at the church parlors of the First Presbyterian church which promises to be one of the brightest events of the season.

Wagoner's orchestra has been secured to furnish music for the occasion and the tables will be spread for almost two hundred guests. An excellent program has been prepared.

All Hail to Oklahoma!

Here's hurrah for Oklahoma, Uncle Sam's newest state! She's a bustling fine addition to the U. S. syndicate, And she's mighty, mighty welcome, as she steps aboard the van, So it's ho for Oklahoma, Oklahoma spick and span!

She's been waiting with a patience that's a credit to her fame For to see the constellation with a star tacked to her name, And we're mighty glad to see her in the bright and starry band, So it's ho for Oklahoma—Oklahoma, here's a hand!

In her soil as yet uncultured lie the greatest stores of wealth; In her air, so crisp and bracing, is an endless store of health; In her people there are neighbors who will fill your life with zest, So it's ho for Oklahoma, Oklahoma of the west!

'Tis a pretty gift for Christmas that they've brought the U. S. A., And a cause for glad thanksgiving on the glad Thanksgiving day, And the flag that waves above us takes a brighter, fairer hue When we think of Oklahoma, Oklahoma, here's to you!

Miss Mary Lewis entertained Saturday evening a number of friends for Mr. Henry, of Chicago.

Mrs. Will Sparks, one of the Tri Kappa patronesses, will entertain the local sorority with luncheon next Friday. Invitations for same were issued this morning.

Charles W. Wamsley and Miss Stella M. Geise were united in marriage Sunday evening at New Salem by Rev. Roscoe O. Smith, pastor of the Little Flatrock Christian church.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Johnson celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary four miles west of town in their beautiful country home, Sunday. About sixty relatives, neighbors and a few very intimate friends were present. The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the reception hall and parlors being decorated in Christmas bells, smilax and holly. The doorways were festooned in smilax and draped to one side with red bells. The dining room was very beautiful all in red and green. The smilax was draped from the center of the room to the corners, tied with large bows of red ribbon and a freeze of holly put all around the able, in the center being a large bouquet of red Pointsettias; the table decorations were taken from New York. Refreshments were served in the dining room, and favors the were tiny bells.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were assisted in receiving in the parlor by Mrs. A. G. Reeve, mother of Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Stacia Johnson, mother of Mr. Johnson, and Miss Anna Wiegand. Mrs. Bruce Johnson wore her wedding gown of ten years ago. Assisting in the dining room were Mrs. George Reeve, Miss Lela Johnson, Miss Charlotte Johnson, Miss Grace Ayres, and Misses Beatrice and Lois Reeve. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson received many beautiful presents including Haviland china, cut glass and thwure from Rushville and other sea ports.

Family Reunion

A family reunion was held at the home of Simeon Barber's in Andersonville Christmas day by his relatives. The friends met at the home of Date Barber, east of Andersonville at ten o'clock with buggy loads of good things to eat, and went to the home of Mr. Barber.

Among those present were Rev. Early Burk and wife, of Wesley Chapel, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Hildreth, of Andersonville, John H. Barber and family, Dayton Barber and family, Bud Hildreth and wife, and John Linville and family. After dinner was over some excellent music was furnished on the violin and guitar by Roscoe Linville and sister which was the center of attraction.

IN THE FOG

BY Richard Harding Davis.

COPYRIGHT, 1901, BY ROBERT HOWARD RUSSELL.

Sir Andrew, with a snort of indignation, fronted the young Solicitor.

"And I suppose yours was a cock-and-bull story, too," he said. "Of course, it must have been, since Lord Chetney is not dead. But don't tell me," he protested, "that you are not Chudleigh's son either."

"I'm sorry," said the youngest member, smiling in some embarrassment, "but my name is not Chudleigh. I assure you, though, that I know the family very well, and that I am on very good terms with them."

"You should be!" exclaimed the Baronet; "and, judging from the liberties you take with the Chetneys, you had better be on very good terms with them, too."

The young man leaned back and glanced toward the servants at the far end of the room.

"It has been so long since I have been in the Club," he said, "that I doubt if even the waiters remember me. Perhaps Joseph may," he added. "Joseph!" he called, and at the word a servant stepped briskly forward.

The young man pointed to the stuffed head of a great lion which was suspended above the fireplace.

"Joseph," he said, "I want you to tell these gentlemen who shot that lion. Who presented it to the Grill?"

Joseph, unused to acting as master of ceremonies to members of the Club, shifted nervously from one foot to the other.

"Why, you—you did," he stammered.

"Of course I did!" exclaimed the young man. "I mean, what is the name of the man who shot it? Tell the gentlemen who I am. They wouldn't believe me."

"Who are you, my lord?" said Joseph. "You are Lord Edam's son, the Earl of Chetney."

"You must admit," said Lord Chetney, when the noise had died away, "that I couldn't remain dead while my little brother was accused of murder. I had to do something. Family pride demanded

"My dear sir!" he cried, "you should spend more time at the House and less at your Club. The Navy Bill was brought up on its third reading at eight o'clock this evening. I spoke for three hours in its favor. My only reason for wishing to return again to the House to-night was to sup on the terrace with my old friend, Admiral Simons; for my work at the House was completed five hours ago, when the Navy Increase Bill was passed by an overwhelming majority."

The Baronet rose and bowed. "I have to thank you, sir," he said, "for a most interesting evening."

The American shoved the wine-card which Joseph had given him toward the gentleman with the black pearl.

"You sign it," he said.

THE END.

THE CHEESEMAKER.

American and Foreign Cheeses and Methods of Making.

An expert and skillful dairyman with the exercise of sufficient care should be able to present the buyer with the best quality of cheese. This is confirmed by the fact that the famous Cheddar cheese of England has been beaten in competition by American Cheddar, though made under entirely different conditions. Occasionally we can find the so called Swiss, Edam and Brie cheeses (which are made in various and distant localities) produced in this country fully equal in flavor to the foreign made article.

But the average American method of making cheese differs widely from the foreign way, and the initial difference is the separation of the whey from the curd. Our dairyman does not draw off the whey until some acidity is shown, when it is drawn off and the curd is left to drain and cool. This is the point which requires skill and experience, as the formation of the acid has to be regulated to a nicety, as heat develops the acidity and cold retards it.

The famous English Cheddar cheeses mentioned above are never allowed to be sold until three months after being made and for the first few days are bandaged and kept in a cheese room (temperature 65 degrees) and turned daily for some time. The process of keeping various kinds of cheese in this way may be altered so as to give great variety to its flavor. Cloths dipped in vinegar are sometimes wrapped around the cheeses, or sometimes they are covered with pulverized sweet herbs. Much ingenuity is often exercised in this way to vary the character of the article.—P. K. Edwards in Country Gentleman.

A Silo Story.

This little story was told by an Indiana dairyman in representing the importance of the silo to the farmer: "Compelling the cow to eat dry fodder instead of rich, juicy silage reminds me of a story a well known evangelist tells. A lady who prided herself on never turning a tramp empty handed from her door was accosted one day by a member of the hobo fraternity when, as it happened, she had nothing but bread to offer him; but, cutting a thick slice, she handed it to him, saying, 'I give you this not for your sake or for mine, but for the Lord's sake.' The tramp took the bread and, turning it over and over in his hand, finally said, 'My dear madam, not for your sake or for my sake, but for the Lord's sake, please put a little butter on this bread.' If the cow could speak, no doubt she would say, 'Not for your sake or for my sake, but for the sake of the milk pail, build a silo.'"

Both Quantity and Quality.

No way is known whereby the real value of a cow may be determined without an actual test. The most convenient and satisfactory test now known is the use of scales and the Babcock test for determining the per cent of butter fat in the milk. The use of milk scales without a butter fat determination does not give the whole facts; neither does a butter fat determination without a consideration of the amount of milk throw much light upon the real worth of cows. Both quantity and quality of milk need to be considered—in short, must be considered—if we are to learn the real facts in regard to our dairy cows.

Covering For Milk Pitchers.

If milk is put in a pitcher or other open vessel it should be covered with a damp cloth, and with the end of this cloth placed in a vessel of water the evaporation from it will continue and assist in keeping the milk cool.

DAIRY WISDOM.

Thoroughly clean the udder by rubbing with a piece of linen. Wash the hands thoroughly before milking. Let the udder be quite dry before you begin to milk. Milk with dry hands. Squeeze the teats with the whole hand. Keep a gentle pressure on the udder. Milk as fast as you can and never cease working until the milk is wholly drawn. Don't strain the teat beyond its natural length.

Some bacteria are of great value to numerous branches of the dairy industry, but the man who desires to deliver his cream in good condition must look upon them all as enemies. He must so far as possible keep the milk and cream and the bacteria separate to prevent disease, contamination and fermentation.

One big mistake is often made in erecting silos. The majority are built too large. Better build two or even more, so as to enable you to use enough out in a day to prevent it from souring. Never try to save $100 on a silo by cheap construction and lose instead $200 worth of badly needed feed.

Before a cow that has been well bred—that is, has come from a good cow and a pure bred, prepotent sire—is condemned be sure that she has reached maturity and that she has had a full year of good, abundant feed.

If you are feeding the calves skim milk, either weigh or measure their feed with a cup. If you feed by guess, don't expect your calves to thrive. Get out of the rut of careless feeding practices and do things scientifically.

If there be soreness or lumps in the udder or teats, stoppage in the milk canal or unnatural colored milk don't mix that milk with any other and don't send it to the creamery.

The man whose cows dry up early to freshen for fall milk is mighty lucky. He gets the most milk when prices are highest.

How to Care For Evening Slippers.

Cloth top slippers should be well whisked each time after wearing, and an occasional cleansing with naphtha or gasoline will keep them clean, says the Washington Star. Evening slippers in pastel shades of kid or in silk or satin may be readily cleaned with an eraser known as art gum that is used by illustrators. Of course, either naphtha or gasoline will clean these soiled slippers. Those made of bronze leather, gilt or gold cloth must be carefully handled to prevent tarnishing and should be painted with a liquid bronze or gold as soon as they begin to look dull. When touched with this brightener it is best to have the slippers fitted over trees; then the cloth or kid will not only keep free from wrinkles, but the correct shape will be retained.

AMUSEMENTS

The Grand theatre will offer another very late program of hand-colored subjects tonight and tomorrow night, entitled, "The Witch's Kiss" and "Elegant Paris." In this program will be seen many pleasing features never before shown here such as an elaborate pyrotechnic display, a beautiful cave scene, and many girls in fantastic costume dance—a program which is sure to please.

In "Elegant Paris" are shown many points of interest in and around the beautiful and world-renowned city. Miss Brown will sing "Perhaps."

The Vaude shows tonight one of the latest Pathe films, "The Witch's Kiss" and "Elegant Paris." The witch is seen in her cave, where she practices her craft. She pets huge snakes that writhe about among the rocks. She kindles a fire and causes boiling water to appear. In the water appears a girl's head, and this is followed by many other mysterious changes, ending in a grand tableau and brilliant display. The views of elegant Paris begins with the entrance to the Bois de Boulogne; this is a beautiful picture, showing the fashionable life of Paris.

By a singular fate both the Vaude and the Grand moving picture shows were supplied with the same subjects by their respective supply houses. But the subjects are of unusual merit. "The Witch's Kiss," is one of those great hand-colored spectacular pieces, which for which the Pathe Brothers of Paris are famous. They are the latest Parisian spectacular productions—shows that can not be seen for less than $1.50 to $2.00. Thus the patrons can afford to visit both the moving picture shows, see the pictures twice and still be at least $1.40 ahead of the deal.

Colorado's New Industry.

"There was a time when Colorado was regarded as principally a mining state, but that time has passed," said A. E. De Riqueles, general manager of a live stock company of Denver, to a representative of the Washington Post. "This winter, for instance, the state will take care of 1,000,000 sheep that were raised on the grazing lands of Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Texas and other states. This has become one of our great industries, the number of the sheep taken care of being about the same as last year. The beet sugar industry is large, and the fodder from the beets is fed to the sheep; also hay and corn. Pens are built and the young lambs taken from their mothers, who reared them in other states, put in these pens, fattened and then in the spring killed for the best hotels and markets of the east."

William Cross, Secretary of State in Oklahoma, signs his name officially "Bill Cross."

GET RICH QUICK.

Schemes of this class have again come to grief along with the gullible investors, causing serious loss of innocent business concerns, and always the case of panics in Wall St.

While this last lesson is yet fresh in mind, it is an opportune moment to consider causes and means to avoid like trouble in the future.

Direct your attention to that greatest of all Newspapers the Cincinnati Enquirer. From its columns one can readily detect the trend of currency, its lodging places, by whom handled, uses made of it, and final results.

Again you read quotations of Bonds, Stocks, and Securities of every nature, fixing Status of all business from the retailer, to United States Government.

Also Current News, facts and reliable data covering the entire world; all sufficiently explicit to enable thinking people to avoid snags and follow the channel of success.

Its extra size and high price, the secret of its ability to discover, obtain, print and serve its patrons with all the news, and cater to wants of people in every calling of life.

The Weekly Enquirer for the year 1908 has greatly increased its Clubbing offers which now include the most select and popular publications of the day at prices slightly over half the regular Subscription rates.

Do not overlook the fact that the year 1908 promises to excel in prosperity any of the past, and that the Enquirer printed at Cincinnati, Ohio, is one of the most reliable sources of information.

"HE DROPPED ON HIS KNEES BEFORE THE FIREPLACE."

It. Now, Arthur, as the younger brother, can't afford to be squeamish, but personally I should hate to have a brother of mine hanged for murder."

"You certainly showed no scruples against hanging me," said the American, "but in the face of your evidence I admit my guilt, and I sentence myself to pay the full penalty of the law as we are made to pay it in my own country. The order of this court is," he announced, "that Joseph shall bring me a wine-card, and that I sign it for five bottles of the Club's best champagne."

"Oh, no!" protested the man with the pearl stud, "it is not for you to sign it. In my opinion it is Sir Andrew who should pay the costs. It is time you knew," he said, turning to that gentleman, "that unconsciously you have been the victim of what I may call a patriotic conspiracy. These stories have had a more serious purpose than merely to amuse. They have been told with the worthy object of detaining you from the House of Commons. I must explain to you, that all through this evening I have had a servant waiting in Trafalgar Square with instructions to bring me word as soon as the light over the House of Commons had ceased to burn. The light is now out, and the object for which we plotted is attained."

The Baronet glanced keenly at the man with the black pearl, and then quickly at his watch. The smile disappeared from his lips, and his face was set in stern and forbidding lines.

"And may I know," he asked icily, "what was the object of your plot?"

"A most worthy one," the other retorted. "Our object was to keep you from advocating the expenditure of many millions of the people's money upon more battleships. In a word, we have been working together to prevent you from passing the Navy Increase Bill."

Sir Andrew's face bloomed with brilliant color. His body shook with supposed emotion.

JOKE ON COMMUTERS

Erie Neatly Turns the Laugh on Its Patrons.

"WHAT OTHERS SAY OF US."

Prints Jokes of Passengers About Railroad's Uncertain Service in New Time Table—Novel Reason For Suggesting Change in Cowcatcher's Position.

Erie railroad commuters whose airy quips, happy quirks, nimble jests and dapper witticisms anent the slowness of Erie trains and the phlegm of Erie directors have added to the gaiety of nations for months past learned recently that the Erie corporation possesses a sense of humor all its own, says the New York World.

In all the months that its train service has been made the butt of many jokes the patient and amiable Erie has never talked back. It has allowed country editors, vaudeville button busters, village cut-ups and smoking car entertainers to go as far as they liked. Not until the other day did the Erie give any sign that the humor was being received either in good or bad temper.

The road's December time table is a document unique of its kind. In the time table under the heading "What Others Think of Us" there appears without comment two pages of the jests that have been born at its expense and on a following page a blank space with the simple heading "Memoranda." Here are some samples:

PUT THE COWCATCHER BEHIND.
During the floods a few years ago many bad washouts occurred on the Erie, and the trains were run at a low rate of speed. When the conductor was punching the ticket of a passenger he remarked:

"Does this railroad company allow passengers to give it advice if they do so in a respectful manner?"

The conductor replied in gruff tones that he guessed so.

"Well, then," it occurred to me that it would be well to detach the cowcatcher from the front of the engine and hitch it to the rear of the train, for, you see, we are not liable to overtake a cow, and what's to prevent a cow from strolling into this car and biting a passenger?"—Magazine.

REQUESTING INFORMATION.
When an Erie train stopped rather abruptly between two stations, a passenger asked the conductor the cause. He replied, "There is a cow on the track," and passed on. The train proceeded and within fifteen minutes stopped again. The passenger asked, "What are you stopping for now?" The conductor replied, "We've caught up to the cow again."

A motherly old lady, anxious to reach her destination was informed that the train would be somewhat delayed, but she concluded to make the best of it. While discussing the probable time of arrival at her station, she asked the conductor, "Who built the Erie railroad?" As he did not know she volunteered the information that the Lord must have built it, for does not the Scriptures say, "And God made the beasts of the earth . . . and everything that creepeth on the earth." . . .—Genesis 1, 25.

—Authors Unknown.

TIME TABLES.
At all the shows ridicule is the big hit. The minstrel middle man asks the end man where he gets his funny jokes. End man replies, "Comparing the running time with the time tables of the Erie railroad."—A Patron.

PROBLEM.
If it takes five days for the Erie railroad to transport an egg thirty miles, as testified in a traffic investigation conducted in Rochester recently, state approximate age at time of frying for a five cent sandwich of an egg laid by a middle western hen, stored in Chicago for some months and then shipped to the eastern market by Erie—Newburg (N. Y.) News.

BASEBALL.
At a recent game of baseball between two National league clubs at the Polo grounds one of the players made an attempt to score by sliding to home plate, but arrived too late. While brushing the dust and dirt from his clothes a rooster in the bleachers exclaimed: "Serves him right. Late and dirty, he looks as if he came in on the Erie."

WHAT HE WANTED.
When looking for information in connection with the running of trains for certain shipments, the patron was referred to the superintendent of transportation for a set of working tables. When making application for them, he requested that Erie Joke Book No. 2 be sent to him.

ERIE IMPROVEMENTS.
Now that the Erie Railroad company has rented $150,000 a year floor space in the McAdoo tunnel buildings it has "been and done" gone, painted its freight sheds and ferry houses a dark color, and we no longer see the familiar dirty yellow that illuminated the foot of Chambers street so long. President Underwood regards the new shade as more "sootable" to things across the river, where dense clouds of smoke still obscure the scenery, fill the eyes of long suffering commuters and befoul pretty villages. No wonder the Erie port sings—

"The poor commuters howl and cuss
Upon the road bituminous."
—New York Press.

EDUCATION.
An ordinarily bright schoolboy from an Erie town, while reciting his lesson one day, did so in a very hesitating and slow manner. The teacher when chiding him for his slowness suggested that if riding on the Erie had such an effect he had better commute on some other line.

IN VAUDEVILLE.
Two vaudeville actors in their work discuss the many medals which one of them has upon his breast as decorations. One, much larger and more showy than the rest, was given to him, he said, for specific bravery. When asked what particular act entitled him to such distinction, he replied: "I am a hero. I got that for riding between Buffalo and New York on the Erie."

ANOTHER ON THE ERIE.
It is said the Erie railroad stopped the transportation of corpses between New York and Buffalo. Reason—Fear that they will not be able to get them there in time for the resurrection.—News, Andover, N. Y.

The last thing in the time table is a picture of the largest and fastest locomotive in the world standing on Erie tracks. The picture apparently is printed for the benefit of whom it may concern.

THE SEASON'S FURS.

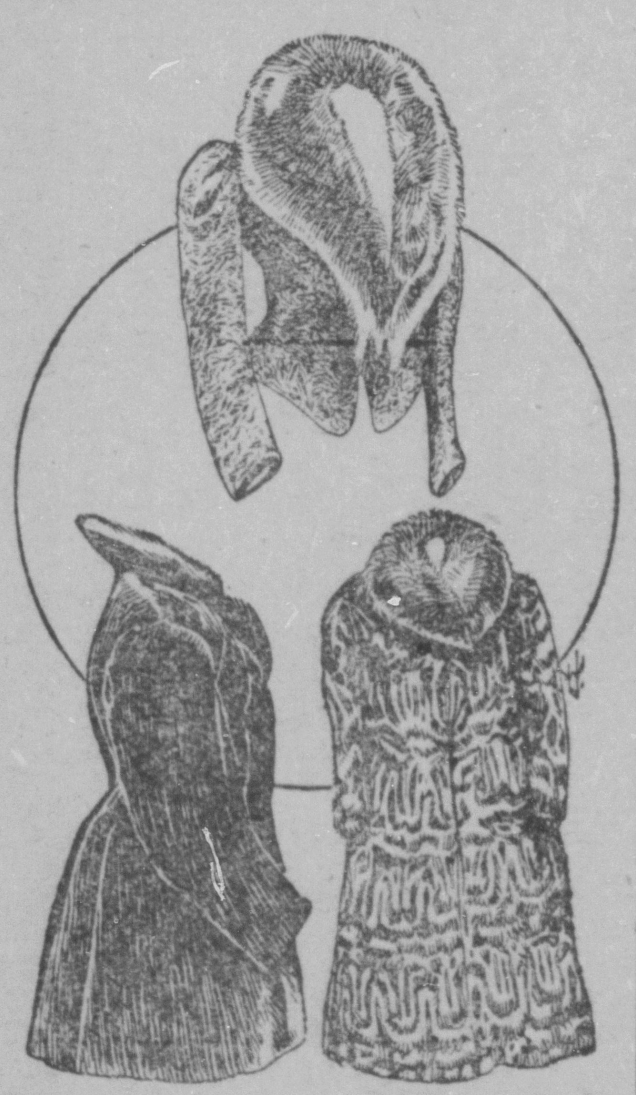

Pelts That Are Favorites and How They Are Fashioned.

It is during the summer that all the fur garments for the winter are made, and so the fashions for the cold days are now ready. There is not a very striking difference between those for the coming winter and those worn last season except there is a noticeable absence of tails on all the neck pieces. Little fur covered pendent balls take the place of the many tails formerly considered necessary. Muffs are smaller, as a rule, larger at the bottom than at the top and are entirely untrimmed. Throw scarfs are with us again, this time longer than last season. One of chinchilla is widened at the bottom and forms a point there, which point is bordered with a two inch band of seal.

As many women can sew furs and can thus make any alteration required in their fur garments, the knowledge of the advance styles ought to be useful. Stoles are longer than before, and the preferred shape is the horseshoe, which means that the scarf goes around the neck, lying flat along the shoulder when not tied. When it is tied it is thus brought up closely around the neck as a protection. There are some stole effects with a short shoulder piece, something like the old victorian. Some of the muffs to match are made perfectly round and rather small, while the others show the flat pouch effect, being narrow at the top and rounding out into the bag design. Both kinds are pretty, especially in chinchilla. It needs a short fur to look well in these muffs. Seal, lamb and chinchilla are the best.

In the list of furs for women this season we find that seal is best, and dearest, too, with lamb as a close second. I do not mention Russian sable, for the price of that is almost prohibitive, but the usual furs worn by the well to do for "nice." Seal is naturally the first choice. I noticed the welcome revival of the thirty-six inch coats half fitted in the back and straight front, made perfectly plain, with untrimmed coat sleeves. There are lapels, large and useful, and the storm collar. For two or three seasons the fancy for scarfs and throws of different kinds of fur from the coat itself made the storm collar superfluous, but now we find it again, not so high perhaps as it was, but still high enough to protect the back of the neck. Seal is so rich in color and has such a velvety softness that it will be sought for by all who can afford it. Nothing looks so well on every one from grandmother down the line.

Seal, chinchilla and lamb are best adapted for coats, although chinchilla is fragile, while the long haired furs are now made up in enormous quantities for automobiling. This sport has become so general that a whole long line of garments for its express purpose is shown. Furs that a few years ago no woman would dream of wearing are now fashionable—for instance, muskrat. I have seen more than I can number of natural muskrat coats for women—some in pony length, some reaching to the knees and some to the foot of the dress. These all have plain coat sleeves and storm collars, and some fasten with large smoke pearl buttons. Russian pony is another favorite for motoring, and coats of these are made in plain sack effects, with double rows of buttons. A few have no storm collar, but small scarfs attached to the coat to button over or fall. Some are long, some short, and all are intended for the same purpose. Mink is another and more expensive fur for these garments, and in that we see the same general plan. One or two of these have the sleeves gathered in to a cuff at the wrist, with a cross band ending in two or three short tails, while the neck is finished with a detachable collar. These mink coats look very clumsy since the fur is so thick, but it seems to me that is its principal charm.

Wildcat is another fur used in these automobile coats, and it makes a really handsome garment. These coats are finest when long enough to show the beauty of the fur.

Civet cat is another fur garment for outings, and the fur is so variegated that a coat made of it is a very swaggar affair. But the best dressed women want something not so heavy and more suitable for street and visiting, and so we have lamb in short pony coats for the young and the slender, with snug fitting coats of the same, simply made and not trimmed—that is, unless we call the black lynx shawl collars trimming. The combination makes this a superb coat.

OLIVE HARPER.

LOOKING AFTER JEWELS.

How Gems and Jewelry Can Be Easily Cleaned.

It is better to keep jewels in boxwood sawdust instead of in velvet lined cases, as the sawdust is very cleansing. Rubbing with a piece of soft chamis is also a good polisher.

Many good jewels are discolored by water, and for these the chamis is absolutely necessary. Turquoises turn green if wet, and pearls become black. These stones may be cleaned by means of a gentle polishing with a piece of chamis or with a dry brush containing soft bristles.

To clean diamonds soak them in lukewarm water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Then take out each piece separately and rub with a soft toothbrush that has been dipped in lukewarm soapsuds made from pure castile soap, rinse in lukewarm water and put away to dry in the sawdust.

The sawdust gets in all the openings in the setting and so proves more cleansing than anything else you could use. When you take them out shake off the sawdust, and they will be found to be clear and brilliant without a flaw or the faintest speck of dust.

To clean gold ornaments when unadorned with gems soak them in soapy lukewarm water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Polish them thoroughly with a toothbrush and dry completely with a piece of chamis. Seal rings can in this way be made to glitter almost like diamonds.

To clean chains composed of close links between which all sorts of dust particles can collect put them to soak in a bottle containing a mixture of soapsuds and prepared chalk. After a few hours shake the bottle well and pour off the lather; then rinse in cold water and dry as thoroughly as possible.

How to Keep Cheese.

Housewives often are dismayed at finding the cheese which they intended to last several days at least quite spoiled the second day, and the fault lies entirely with the grocer, who must have sent bad cheese in the first place. Cheese spoils more quickly in hot than in cold weather, and the preventive is to keep it in the icebox. The fine imported varieties will not keep at all, not more than a day or two, says the Chicago Tribune, so it is best to consider just what kinds will and buy them only until cold weather comes. Roquefort, Camembert, the useful Swiss cheese and the home-made cottage cheese are about the only ones to be relied upon. Dip a piece of clean cheesecloth in salty water to wrap the Swiss cheese in and keep in the icebox, changing cloth every day. For Roquefort have the cloth dry and lay the package directly on ice, only keeping off long enough to serve. Keep the homemade in a jar or it will spoil.

How to Buy Shoes.

"People would find less difficulty with ready made shoes," said an experienced salesman, "if they would stand up to fit them on instead of sitting down. Nine persons out of ten, particularly women, want a comfortable chair while they are fitting a shoe, and it is with the greatest difficulty that you can get them to stand for a few minutes, even after the shoe is fitted. Then when they begin walking about they wonder why the shoes are not so comfortable as they were at first trial. A woman's foot is considerably smaller when she sits in a chair than when she walks about. Exercise brings a larger quantity of blood into the feet, and they swell appreciably. In buying shoes this fact should be borne in mind."

How to Clean Vases.

For the stains which often mark deep vases when they are in constant use the same treatment as that for water bottles should be followed. Put potato parings into the vase, with water enough to cover the stains, leaving them there overnight. Then empty them out and wash in the usual way. Repeat if necessary. A cleaning pad may be made by cutting a groove around a long stick near one end and tying securely by means of the groove a bit of cloth doubled up so that it makes a round, ball-like covering to the tip. With this all sorts of ugly stains can be got at which would otherwise be impossible.

How to Vary School Lunches.

To vary the children's school lunches fill the sandwiches with mixed fruits and nuts. Wash, stone and seed equal weights of figs, raisins and dates and put them through a meat chopper with half the weight in mixed and prepared nuts. Feed the chopper, alternating the fruit and the nuts, a little at a time, until they are all chopped and mixed. Pack it down tight in baking powder cans, and when molded slice off the slices and put between bread and butter.

How to Amuse Ailing Children.

When children are sick and have to stay in bed or indoors it is hard for mothers to amuse them. Get a wall paper sample book from the decorators and let them cut out the flowers and different designs, arranging them in another book so that it will make a pretty scrapbook. In this way they will spend many happy hours and be contented.

How to Make a Gooseberry Pie.

When making a gooseberry pie, line a deep pie plate with a rich crust and fill with gooseberry preserve, sprinkling a little flour over the top. When baked, cover with a meringue or with whipped cream sweetened to taste and set on ice.

EMOTIONS OF BIRDS.

Faces of Sparrows Mirror Their Feelings, Says a Scientist.

PROVES IT BY PHOTOGRAPHS.

Clinton G. Abbott Exhibits Pictures Showing Expressions of Anticipation, Disappointment and Surprise. How Mother Catbird Expressed Her Fear of Stuffed Owl.

"I'm no nature fakir, but I am convinced that such emotions as anticipation, supplication, satisfaction, surprise and attention not only live in the breasts of the feathered tribe, but that the outward expression of these emotions is mirrored in the tiny faces of birds."

This declaration by Clinton G. Abbott, a well known scientist of New York, caused a stir among members of the twenty-fifth annual congress of American ornithologists at the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia the other day, says a special dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.

With this declaration as the keynote of one of the most notable addresses ever delivered on the subject, Dr. Abbott flashed upon the scene a photograph showing two small sparrows with the mother bird upon the limb of a tree.

"While I was on Long Island I arranged early one morning my camera so that it would face a limb of a tree in which I knew the sparrows shown in this picture made their home," said Dr. Abbott. "I attached a long string to the pressure bulb and then, with this in hand, hid myself in some distant shrubbery. The two younger birds appeared and shortly after the mother, pluming her wings as if for flight. A moment afterward she flew into the woods, and I got a photograph of the little ones awaiting her return. Their bills were open, as you see them in the picture, and there is no one who will not agree with me that anticipation is clearly evident in the posture and in their bills and tiny faces."

There was an outburst of applause after the audience had taken in the details of the picture.

"Later," Dr. Abbott continued, "I got a picture of the birds after the feeding. The mother had returned with food for one in her bill. On the face of the unfed one was an expression of disappointment."

This picture was flashed on the screen.

"There," he continued; "you can see the little one still crying for food. The mother left again and returned with food for the other. In another picture I have the two satisfied youngsters on the limb and the mother as satisfied in the nest."

"All the emotions I specified are shown on the faces of birds. I placed a stuffed owl in a tree near the nest of a catbird and then waited until morning to see the expression on the bird's face at the sight of the stranger. In the morning the catbird came out and looked quizzically at the owl, completely surprised at the presence of a possible enemy. He then made all kinds of noise with his wings and mouth to scare the owl away. After each effort at scaring there was a look of attention on the face of the catbird, and that look is photographed before you.

"Next day I took the owl away. Then I discovered that the catbird had two young ones in a nest. They were permitted to come out on the limb of the tree, and I got in another picture the look of self satisfaction upon that catbird's face."

NOVEL WAGER OF GATES.

How Famous Plunger Won $500 on Drop of Water.

John W. Gates, the financier, was riding with a friend and fellow plunger the other day in a Pullman car, says the New York World. It was raining, and the rain was coursing down the window panes. Gates watched the drops. Two were trickling down side by side.

"Bet you $500," said Gates, "that my drop reaches the bottom of the window before your drop gets there."

"I'll go you," said the other man. Both watched with eager interest the two drops. First one was ahead, then the other. Gates' drop of water made a final spurt and nestled, a glistening globe, on the bottom sash.

"I win," said John W., pocketing the yellow backs which had been hastily counted out and put up while the drops were dropping.

Thirty Meals From One Turnip.

Mrs. Robert Henderson, the wife of the discoverer of the Klondike, has the largest nugget ever taken from the ground in the Klondike. It was taken out last fall, and Mrs. Henderson has the honor of having dug it up herself, says a Dawson dispatch to the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The nugget weighs twenty-five pounds and is nothing more or less than a giant turnip, grown in the Henderson garden at their home in South Dawson. The turnip looks in size more like a pumpkin. It is sound and has the peculiar quality of being tender and delicious to the extent that can be secured only in vegetables grown under the midnight sun. Were navigation still open Mrs. Henderson would send the turnip to the coast to surprise the natives of Puyallup, Chilliwack, Seattle and Gotham. As it is, she will slice it and have turnip off the one root for thirty successive meals.

Several crack shots from this city will attend the shoot at Gowdy on New Year's day.

Mrs. J. Q. Thomas, of Brookside, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, is somewhat improved.

Washington Camp No. 9 P. O. S. of A. will hold their semi-annual election of officers tonight. A full attendance of officers and members is desired.

The Rebekah lodge will have a watch party on New Year's eve at the Odd Fellows' hall. Each member can invite a friend and the members will provide the refreshments.

A. T. Wagoner, ninety-two years of age, and one of the oldest men in the county, is at the point of death at the home of his son-in-law, W. T. Simpson, in North Sexton street.

Mrs. Ruth Tevis Spencer, who has been studying voice in Indianapolis since her marriage, showed marked improvements in two solos rendered at services at St. Paul's M. E. church Sunday.

There will be skating every night and afternoon at the Kramer rink this week. On Tuesday night the rink will be kept open until after midnight that patrons may skate the old year out. A private party has the rink engaged for Thursday evening.

A horse hitched to Harry Kramer's delivery wagon (number four) ran away this morning, dashing madly down the street, and all that sort of thing. Charley Meyers did the hero act, stopping the maddening, galloping animal with dilated nostrils, at the corner of Main and Second streets.

No Laughing Allowed There.

Neither men nor women are allowed to laugh when their nerves are shattered. That is, their nerves don't allow them to. But one box of Seline Pills will make you feel better. $1 a box; six boxes with full guarantee for any form of weakness in men or women. Address or call Hargrove & Mullin, Rushville. This is the store that sells all the principal remedies and does not substitute.

That Chicago man who put up a placard in his window to make it known that a wife was wanted at that number is convinced that plain business methods are the best.

A cup of coffee, a bit of sausage, and Mrs. Austins Buckwheat cakes is a breakfast fit for a king.

Mrs. John Walters is ill at her home in West Fifth street.

Miss Winnie Glone is confined to her home on account of illness.

The Modern Woodmen will have several candidates to initiate tonight.

The boy's iron automobile is still at Cassidy & Cox's shoe store as no one brought in No. 159.

Dr. J. G. Lewis has purchased from James Stiers his partnership in the Rush Auto company.

Misses Fern and Nellie Clifton will come tonight from Decatur, Ill., to make their future home with their father, W. E. Clifton, in this city.

Jesse M. Stone, of Carthage, authorized his announcement as candidate for county auditor today. In all probability he will not have any opposition in the convention.

Like a finger pointing heavenward, stands the old brick stack, sentinel-like a monument over the ruins of the Carmichael mill; it is all that is left of an old land mark.

At the Rushville township convention Saturday, Donald Smith was selected as a delegate to the Sixth district convention to be held in Connersville next Thursday. John O. Wallace was named as alternate.

Pleasant Newhouse, who attended an oyster supper near Glenwood Saturday night, suffered an embarrassing accident. His vest, in the rear, was split from stem to stern and repairs had to be made with a piece of rope.

Albert Capp, the "Cord Wood King" living just to the rear of Jersey city on the south, and who is trying to wrestle the honors of philosopher and humorist from Alec Williams, the mayor of the Jerseyites, says: "The reason the livery barn did not catch fire and burn with the Carmichael mill Thursday night was because there were too many plugs therein."

Head Consul A. R. Tolbert of Lincoln, Neb., will deliver the silver anniversary address at Tomlinson hall, Indianapolis Saturday evening, Jan. 4, 1908. The public meeting will be preceded by a monster street parade of uniformed Woodmen and others not in uniform from all over the State. The event will close with a big banquet. Several Woodmen of this city contemplate going.

It is said that eating candy kills the appetite for liquor, but with the price of chocolate boudons going up, it may be cheaper to scorn the water wagon.

SUGGESTION OF GRAFT IN VISIT

Drummer Follows Pure Food Inspector and Sells Recommended Articles

Rushville grocers as well as those of other cities of the State, and along with meat dealers, market men and restaurant keepers are beginning to think there may be some phase connected with the pure food law of which advantage is being taken. The word graft is being mentioned prominently in State dispatches relating to the sentiment created. It is claimed many of the inspectors assert more power than they are entitled to and furthermore some of the recommendations appear foolish.

A peculiar incident that transpired at Bluffton, last week, is given prominence by the newspapers of that city. A pure food law inspector visited a grocery and went through the routine of an inspection. He told the groceryman a number of things he would need to buy to keep within the recommendations of the law. A cheese cover, a cake cover and a number of articles were named. On the following day, a salesman selling the very same articles the inspector had stated the need of, visited the grocer and solicited orders. The question that bothers the Bluffton grocers is, do the inspectors and salesmen have a working agreement? Is the salesman shadowing the inspector or was it just coincidence?

Here's Where the Fun Comes In

"Love's Labor Lost," is the title of a yuletide tragedy in which a prominent Rushville girl figured. Many days before Xmas this young lady of unusual comeliness, spent many tireless hours making a hand-colored picture of herself for a gentleman friend, who lives in Greenfield. It was with a bounding heart, full of joy and other emotions that the dear girl presented the gift all done up in baby ribbons and with an elegant sufficiency of perfume, to her friend Christmas day. Of course the present was highly appreciated, but listen: An I. & O. crew returning from their day's run found the sweet scented package in a seat in the coach where the Greenfield man thoughtlessly left it. Unwrapping it at the car barns the crew readily recognized the girl's picture and immediately apprised her of their find. But she swears she will not go after it. Neither will she write her gentleman friend regarding it. The traction bunch say they will keep it until New Year's day and if it is not claimed by that time they will drape it in mourning and hang it in the office.

SWINGING RURAL MAIL BOXES

Patrons Can Tell at a Distance Whether There is Mail in the Box

A unique mail box for use on rural delivery routes has been approved by the postoffice department. The box is arranged at the end of a bar which works on a pivot. The mail carrier does not have to leave his vehicle in making delivery and and collection, but simply reaches out with a rod and draws the box to him. In rainy weather this feature will enable the carrier to pull the box entirely within his buggy. When released the box swings automatically back to its regular position, which is parallel with the road.

By a simple device the owner is able to tell from a distance whether there is any mail in the box. This device enables the carrier to place the bar at right angles to the road, the result of which is the box stands the same way, which indicates that there is mail in the box, while if the box is given a swing so that it is parallel with the road, the position indicates that the box is empty.

The carrier not being compelled to leave his vehicle, loss of time in delivering and collecting mail under the conditions outlined is reduced to a minimum.

Obituary.

Mrs. Alice E. Winship, wife of Wm. H. Winship, died Monday noon, December 22d, after a severe illness of only a few hours. She has been in poor health, however, for some months. She was the daughter of William and Lavonna Anderson and was born near Richland December 28th, 1853. She was married to Mr. Winship June 24th, 1873, and was the mother of three daughters, Eavona, Mary Blanche Tompkins, and Vera Louise. She was a member of the Presbyterian church at Kingston, and a lady of beautiful character, beloved by rich and poor, to all of whom she was uniformly kind. Funeral services were conducted at the home at 10 a. m., Wednesday, by Rev. F. M. Westhafer, pastor of Milroy M. E. church. Burial at East Hill, Rushville.

An X-ray examination has disclosed the fact that a soldier in Indianapolis has two hearts. But this ought not to be thought so remarkable since it is a authenticated fact that a sailor anywhere leaves a heart in every port.

The money market was tight at Shelbyville last week. A time lock on a vault balked and the doors had to be opened with a battering-ram.

Had this sunshine continued another day or two, we would have had a first snake killing story—and likely the report of some family eating a mess of dandelion greens.

Over three-fourths of the counties in Indiana have juvenile courts established. The remaining fourth is composed of a group of counties lying in the southeast part of the State and which includes Rush county.

The Baltimore dairy lunchrooms in Indianapolis will suffer a big loss in business when the annual pass of many Rushville citizens becomes "null and void" on January 1st. Quite a few will "swear-off" going to Indianapolis on that date.
